WOLVERINE'S DAHLIAS

PLANTING INSTRUCTIONS

DAHLIA ROOTS should be planted 6 inches deep, laid flat down, with eye up and about 2 inches from the stake. Cover with earth not over 2 inches in depth, filling in as the plant develops. It is best to have your ground well spaded and prepared, and your stakes placed about 3 feet apart, or 2 feet apart for a single row, 3 feet is advisable if room will permit.

The safest fertilizer is bone meal, spread it generously over your garden and work it well into your soil before planting; then every 4 or 5 weeks thereafter.

DAHLIA PLANTS—are rooted cuttings shipped to you in pots, and are very satisfactory, saving you more than half the price of roots.

When plants are received, they should be carefully removed from the carton, and the moss and packing removed from the pot. Then give them a good watering, set them in a shaded spot for a day or two to let them freshen up. Then plant them a little deeper than if a root would be planted. Now keep them well cultivated and watered throughout the growing season. As the plants grow, care should be taken to tie up all shoots to the stake. Disbud for large blooms.

Sincerely yours,

JOHN A. PONSHAIR

WOLVERINE GARDENS.
